

Beat: News

Google to remove links to `revenge porn` from search results

-, 20.06.2015, 19:24 Time

USPA News - Internet search giant Google announced on Saturday that it will soon start to remove links to web pages that contain so-called revenge porn, responding to increased calls to combat pornographic images that were shared without consent. "We've heard many troubling stories of `revenge porn`: an ex-partner seeking to publicly humiliate a person by posting private images of them, or hackers stealing and distributing images from victims' accounts," said Amit Singhal, senior vice president of Google Search.

"Some images even end up on `sextortion` sites that force people to pay to have their images removed." To minimize the impact of revenge porn, Google will begin to honor requests from people whose nude or sexually explicit images are being shared online. "We know this won't solve the problem of revenge porn - we aren't able, of course, to remove these images from the websites themselves - but we hope that honoring people's requests to remove such imagery from our search results can help," Singhal explained. In the coming weeks, Google plans to put up a web form where people can request the search giant to remove links to certain web pages that contain revenge porn.

Article online:

<https://www.uspa24.com/bericht-4342/google-to-remove-links-to-revenge-porn-from-search-results.html>

Editorial office and responsibility:

V.i.S.d.P. & Sect. 6 MDSStV (German Interstate Media Services Agreement):

Exemption from liability:

The publisher shall assume no liability for the accuracy or completeness of the published report and is merely providing space for the submission of and access to third-party content. Liability for the content of a report lies solely with the author of such report.

Editorial program service of General News Agency:

UPA United Press Agency LTD
483 Green Lanes
UK, London N13NV 4BS
contact (at) unitedpressagency.com
Official Federal Reg. No. 7442619